CERC Campaigns against Misleading Advertisements

Misleading, false and objectionable advertisements are a menace in India. They lure consumers into buying products or services which are not as good as they claim to be. Some of the products making false and misleading claims are heavily priced. These advertisements are seen and viewed in low literacy and low income populations in urban and rural areas. This makes it more likely that those consumers get duped and make improper choices of goods and services.

Over the years, CERC has made it a mission to curb the menace of misleading advertisements. We have reported them to Central Consumer Protection Authority (CCPA), Advertising Standards Council of India (ASCI), GAMA (Grievances Against Misleading Advertisements) and other Regulators, urging them to take strict action against the advertisers.

Celebrities endorsing products with questionable claims have also been called out. Some of the celebrities seen endorsing different brands with misleading claims repeatedly:

Tapsee Pannu

- Gynoveda
- Green Soul Chairs
- Noise Watch

Kareena Kapoor

- Tops
- St. Botanica

We found that the following brands were featured in our last year's compilation and continue to make misleading claims this year too.

- Gritzo Supermilk
- Amul paneer
- Amul buffalo milk
- Nat Habit Skin Malai
- Haier Water Heater
- Panasonic AC

This implies that there need to be stringent laws to ensure that repeat offenders are penalised. Although the Consumer Protection Act 2019 does have provisions for this but it needs stricter implementation.

What does it mean?

Misleading:

Any advertisement that could cause viewers to misunderstand or make incorrect decisions regardless of whether it is consistent with facts

False:

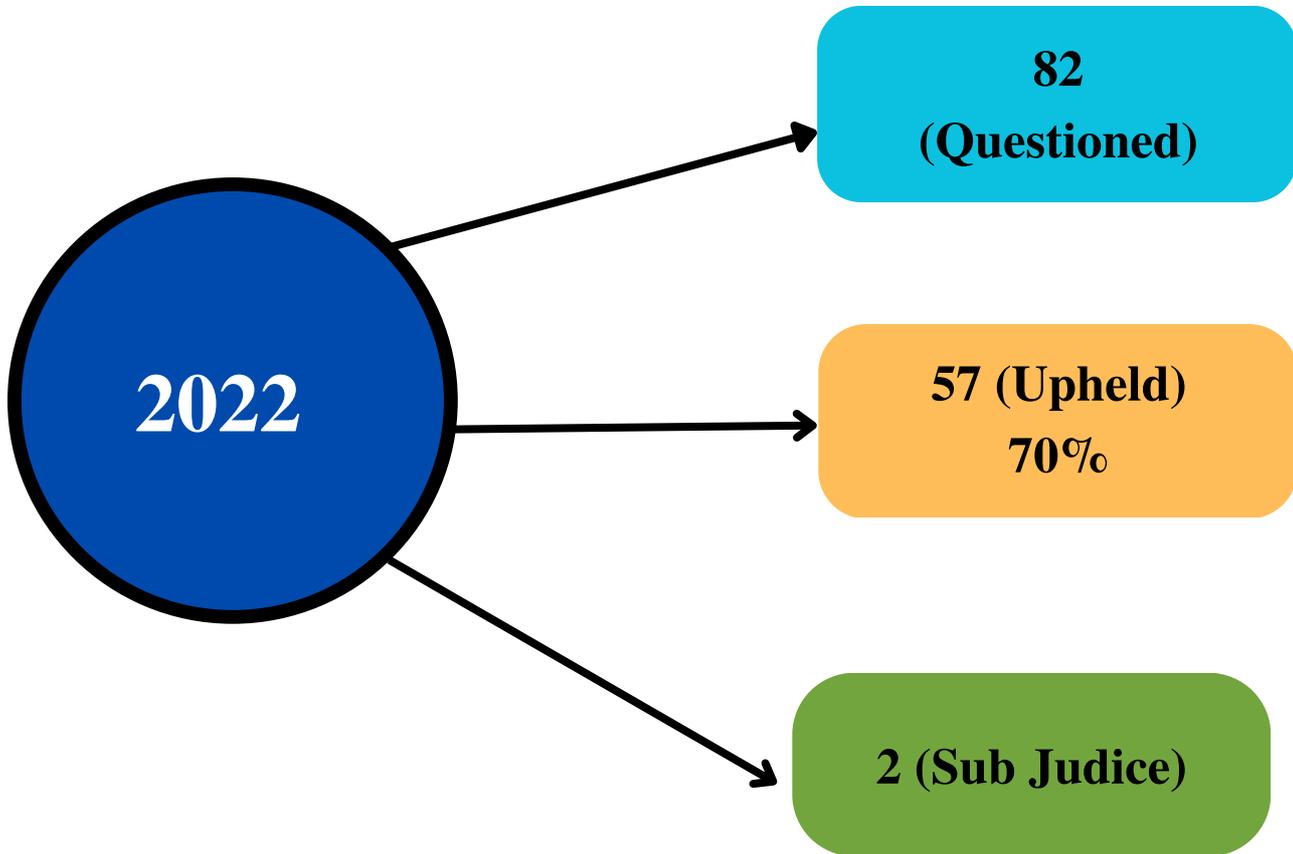

Any advertisement that is inconsistent with facts and where the deviation could lead the general public to make incorrect decisions.

Objectionable:

Any advertisement that may show unsafe acts which may influence viewers to replicate them; obscene visuals which may not be tasteful for a family audience; or advertisements of products like alcohol, cigarettes that are prohibited.

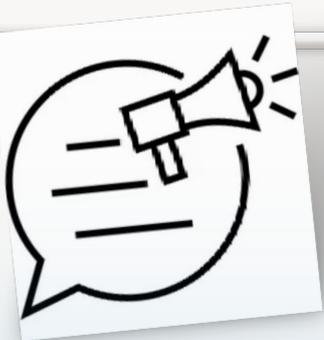

In the year 2022

These are the advertisements with the objectionable claims questioned in 2022. ASCI found 70% of the advertisement questioned by us to be misleading and advised these advertisers to either withdraw or modify the advertisements.

We have divided the advertisements sector-wise:

1. Advertisements with claims of healthcare and well-being (6)
 2. Advertisements with claims of immunity boosting (4)
 3. Advertisements of the food category (9)
 4. Advertisements of the personal care category (16)
 5. Advertisements of the education category (2)
 6. Advertisements of Home Appliances (6)
 7. Advertisements of other category (9)

About CERC

- Consumer Rights protection and justice for consumers have been the focus of Consumer Education and Research Centre (CERC) right from its inception in 1978. CERC is India's only Consumer Rights Organisation that provides 360 degree service to the consumer in terms of Education, Empowerment and Protection.
- A broad range of activities are undertaken in the organization – grievance redressal through mediation and litigation, consumer education and awareness building through various publications and outreach activities, testing and analysis of consumer products in our in-house product testing laboratories, advocacy for laws and regulations that better protect consumers, as well as a number of projects executed in various areas pertinent to consumer protection and empowerment.
- Promoting sustainable consumption too is a major are of activity in CERC
